VULGAR CARDS ARE TABOOED

STATIONERS URGE CAREFUL DISCRIMINATION BETWEEN VULGARITY AND HUMOR.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 12.—The committee on miscellaneous business of the International Stationers and Manufacturers presented a report today to the convention urging that the members of the association refuse to display or sell post cards that tend to be vulgar, suggestive and indecent and urging retailers and buyers of post cards to carefully draw the line between vulgarity and humor.

The report also calls the attention of the association to the matter of tariff revision, setting forth:

"There is probably not a retail stationer here who does not pay duties either directly to the United States government or indirectly to importers and jobbers, and in many cases on account of high duties and excessive profits to home manufacturers. The tariff is a matter which directly affects every business man in the country and we should watch with care its revision, and especially the revision of such schedules as interest our business."

HEARST CHOSEN

Action of Committee Ratified by Municipal Ownership League.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—William Randolph Hearst was nominated for mayor of New York tonight at a convention of the Municipal ownership league and allied organizations held in Carnegie hall. The convention was a popular one, the audience nearly being packed. The nominations for the big hall were taken to the hippodrome, the crowd outside the building was estimated at several thousand. Mr. Hearst was notified of the nomination several days ago by committees of the Municipal ownership league and accepted tonight's action pending the future of ratification. There were a number of informal speeches during the meeting in all of which the present city administration and the candidates on the Democratic ticket were sharply attacked.

Judge Seabury dominated Mr. Hearst and much enthusiasm. The delegates cheered and waved flags, the demonstration continuing for several minutes. The convention then named John Ford for city comptroller and J. G. Phelps Stokes for president of the board of aldermen.

The platform demands "the immediate establishment and operation by the city of a plant for the sale and distribution of gas to all citizens" at half the price now charged; the construction of subways by the city and their operation by the city. In a short speech Mr. Hearst promised to present his principles and purposes in a letter of acceptance.

FREER TRADE IS ADVOCATED

SENATOR LONG TALKS WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ON THE NEEDS OF THE FILIPINOS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—In the opinion of Senator Long, of Kansas, who made the trip to the Far East with Secretary Taft and party, the greatest need of the Filipinos is free trade with the United States. The senator talked with the president today about the needs of the Philippines. He told the president that in his judgment the islands would be in a serious financial condition unless a reduction of duties on their products entering the United States was made.

"Recently," said the senator, "the Filipinos have suffered from typhoons and drought. As a consequence their crops have either failed or been wiped out and the people are becoming discontented. Their discontent does not take a revolutionary form, but is simply the result of existing conditions."

Senator Long discussed railroad rate legislation with the president freely. He expressed the belief that the matter would be disposed of early in the approaching session.

ARE ACCUSED OF DEFRAUDING CITY

SEVERAL PROMINENT PHILADELPHIANS ARRESTED ON SERIOUS CHARGE.—TURMOIL.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 12.—The administration of former Mayor Samuel H. Ashbridge was brought into the local political turmoil today when warrants were sworn out for the arrest of Abraham L. English, who was director of public safety during the term of Mayor Ashbridge, and four others, charging them with conspiracy to cheat and defraud the city in connection with the execution and carrying out of a contract for the erection of a smallpox hospital which is one of a group of buildings forming the new municipal hospital. The other accused men are John W. Henderson and Henry E. Baton, of the contracting firm of Henderson & Co., Philip Johnson, a former city architect and brother-in-law of Israel W. Durham, leader of the local Republican organization, and James D. Finley, a cousin of Durham and a former inspector at the new municipal hospital. Henderson, Baton and Finley entered bail in the sum of $5,000.

The warrants were sworn out at the instance of Mayor Weaver and are based on an investigation covering a period of several weeks. The contract for the smallpox hospital was awarded to the Henderson firm by Director English in 1903, the firm's bid being $142,700.

No one interested in the prosecution will make a statement as to how the city is alleged to have been defrauded.

NEW YORK WINS THIRD GAME OF THE CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 12.—It was all New York today in the third game for the championship of the world between the National league champions and the American league pennant winners. The visitors scored nine runs while the home team failed to cross the plate. The score stood two to one in favor of New York. Mathewson pitched a rather meagre game. The Philadelphia hitters took for only four singles the same number of hits they made off him Monday. Only one home player reached second base. Coakley, the former Holy Cross college pitcher, was the most dangerous opponent the visitors meeting in the shape of the home team. Mathewson's two bases on balls gave him the most trouble. He laboured three innings before he could settle down to the usual good form worked by the Giant pitchers was missing.

New York started off with a rush in the first inning. Bresnahan was hit by a pitched ball. Brown fouled to Coakley, who held Bresnahan on first. Donlin singled, Bresnahan going to third. McGann also singled, on which Donlin moved to third while Bresnahan scored the first run. Then Murphy fouled to Murphy, strikes on which Donlin scored. Dahlen walked, four bases filling the bases. Devlin chopped a grounder to Coakley, who threw McGann out at the plate and Schreck made a quick throw to first, finishing off Devlin, completing a double play. Excepting a hard line drive of McGann's fly in the third inning the New Yorkers were out in order in the second, third and fourth innings.

The fifth inning was a disastrous affair for the home rooters. Mathewson went out on an easy grounder to Merkle. Bresnahan was given a base on balls. Murphy fumbled an Brown's grounder, Bresnahan going to third and Brown took second on the throw to catch Bresnahan at third. Donlin was purposely given four balls, filling the bases. Then Murphy fumbled McGann's easy grounder, Bresnahan scoring. A single by Merkle to right scored Brown. Dahlen forced Merkle at second on which play Donlin scored and a moment later Dahlen stole second and Merkle third. McGann scored the fourth run of the inning on Devlin's single. Dahlen going to third. Philadelphia's second and last run came in the sixth inning. Devlin stole second and Doolin slid home with the first run. Devlin scored the third run on the third baseman's error in the seventh inning, Doolin being put out by Dahlen.

Powers relieved Schreck behind the bat in the sixth inning and in the seventh innings he threw men out who tried to steal second. Powers made a good throw to Merkle, who dropped the ball, and Brown was safe. McGann sent both men home with a two-base hit and a moment later the New York outfielder was caught napping at second by a fine throw by Powers, after the latter had fooled Mathewson into thinking that Powers was going to throw to Merkle, the first man in the third inning was safe on Devlin's fumble of his grounder. He stole second and was caught between the bases on Dowie's choice. Seybold got to first in the second on Mathewson's error, but he was forced out. In the fifth M. Cross singled and was left on first. In the seventh Davis singled and was thrown out, going to second after a long fly had been captured. Seybold singled in the same inning and never got away from first base. In the eighth Coakley was hit by a pitched ball after two were out and the men who followed him was an easy victim. With two out in the ninth M. Cross singled and Seybold ended the game by striking out.

The day was cold and raw for baseball. The attendance was officially announced at 10,991, the receipts were $5,38, and the players share $1,56. The total attendance of the three games is 32,326 and the total receipts $10,75. The teams will play in New York tomorrow and Saturday. Plank and Powers will be the Philadelphia battery tomorrow. Score:

New York	2 0 0 0 5 0 0 0 2	9	8	1

MUCH INTEREST IN GAME TOMORROW

Local football fans are displaying a great deal of interest in the game between the Colorado Springs High school Terrors and the East Denver High school eleven, which will be played tomorrow afternoon on Washburn field. The East Denverites are acknowledged to be the strongest bunch of athletes in the western division of the interscholastic league, while the Terrors are looked to bring home the big scores from the Southern division games. Saturday's game will give the first opportunity to get a fair line of the respective merits of the two divisions and may also forecast the winner of this season's pennant as the two teams will probably play for the championship at the end of the season. The locals expect to win, but a close score is looked for by those who deal in "dope."

CHICAGO AMERICANS DEFEAT NATIONALS

CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—The Chicago American league baseball team defeated the Nationals today in the second game of the series for the championship of Chicago. Rudbach, of the Nationals, was hit hard and was replaced in the second inning by Brown. Donlin, of the Americans, made an exciting homerun with two men on bases. The Americans fielded well, but the Nationals outbatted them. Score:

Americans	4 1 1 0 0 0 0 0 1	7	8	3
Nationals	1 0 0 0 0 0 2 0 0	4	12	3

BOSTON NATIONALS ARE OUTCLASSED

BOSTON, Oct. 12.—The local American league team by winning today's game has only to win one game out of the remaining three to take the series. The National team was completely outclassed today. Score:

		R.	H.	E.

Today's news was of an exceptionally favorable character for while the frost line did not extend to New Orleans, which it could have had to do to break all previous records, it touched points as far as 35 miles north of New Orleans, Crowley, La., reporting a slight fall. Aside from the frost, the temperature dropped almost to the freezing point in some sections of Louisiana, with the effect undoubtedly of killing or driving into hibernation all the mosquitoes that might have existed in the infected places.

CORDIAL WELCOME FOR PRINCE LOUIS

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Rear Admiral Evans' battleship squadron left its anchorage in the North river today and headed for Hampton Roads. Thence the squadron will go to Annapolis, arriving there on the morning of October 31, where it will meet the British fleet under Prince Louis of Battenberg. While the fleets are lying off Annapolis Prince Louis and his officers will go to Washington, to be received by the president. Escorted by Rear Admiral Browneson's division of four armored cruisers the British squadron will leave Annapolis on November 8, arriving here the next day, the ninth being the king's birthday.

AWFUL MURDER

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The finding of a man's head in East Eighteenth street, near Avenue C, early today resulted in the discovery of an unusually revolting murder, the victim of which was Thomas Corcoran. Corcoran was killed probably last night in the house, No. 149 Third avenue.

After the picking up of the head, the other portions of the body were found in pieces in the Third avenue house. The arms below the elbows and legs below the knees had been packed in a suit case and the trunk and remaining portions of the arms and legs were hidden in a clothes hamper in a room occupied by Frederick Bauer, an elevator runner.

Bauer was arrested. The point at which the head was found is more than a quarter of a mile away from the Third avenue. The head was wrapped in the Sunday supplement of a German newspaper and a blue and white shirt. The murder was discovered through a story told by George Lafole, who had a room adjoining Bauer's and who rushed into a police station today saying that he had lain awake for hours listening to noises which he thought proceeded from Bauer's room. He said that late last night, he heard at least two men quarreling in the adjoining room. He heard a shot and the sound of someone falling on the floor. Then he went to sleep. About 2:30 this morning Lafole said he was awakened by strange noises in the room where the shot had been heard. Twice a man opened the door and went out, said Lafole, after lying awake listening for some time, he decided that some of the sounds he heard were the noises of bones being broken. This suspicion caused him to notify the police.

Bauer was found entering his room by the police and said to them:

"I found my room like this when I awoke this morning." He said that he had brought two men to his room last night, one a soldier. Bauer fell asleep while these men talked, he said, and when he awoke the soldier was gone, leaving the other's body as the police found it. The police found that Bauer's socks, the right arm of his undershirt and the right arm of his outer shirt were covered with blood. A badly nicked razor was found on top of a trunk in Bauer's room and a revolver with one chamber empty was also found in the room.

Bauer, who is 39 years old, is employed as an elevator man at the Union Square hotel, and when he went to work today he was sent home because of extreme nervousness. An examination of Corcoran's head showed that he had been shot in the face.

The police make the allegation that it was a crime of degeneracy. Corcoran came here from Ireland several years ago and made his home in this city with a married sister.

He was a ticket chopper on the elevated railroad.

WOULD SHOOT THE SUFFERING

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 12.—Miss Anne S. Hall, of Cincinnati, startled the American Humane association convention here by proposing the adoption of a resolution favoring legalizing the administration of anesthetics to persons dying in agony. Miss Hall said there were many cases in time of railway wrecks when trainmen and passengers were so badly injured that their lives could not possibly be saved. In such cases Miss Hall thought it ought to be permissible to administer anesthetics to relieve their sufferings. She was in favor of the use of anesthetics where persons were dying of incurable injuries in which they suffered agony.

In the discussion one woman said that she would not hesitate to shoot a person who might be dying in agony in a railroad wreck but she did not think the laws should be so amended conferring upon any one the right to determine when any person should die by giving them the ether. The resolution was ruled out.

ands and Officer Larrabee forced ance to the house through the door while Officer Gillingham watched the window of the bedroom. He told how Mrs. Rowlands came to him and placed her arms around his neck, asking: "What is the meaning of this?"

Upon cross-examination Rowlands said that he first suspected his wife of infidelity on August 13, after a conference with his brother. Prompted by the plaintiff, counsel asked if prior to the marriage with his wife he had not been intimate with her. The reply was "No, sir."

"Did you not sustain intimate relations with her in a rooming house over Davis' drug store during the August prior to the marriage?" questioned counsel for the plaintiff, and again came the reply, "No, sir."

"Were you not intimate with her later at the Charter Oak ranch?" was asked, and for the third time came the reply: "No, sir."

Witness explained that it was at the suggestion of his wife that they went to Cheyenne, Wyo., to have the marriage ceremony performed.

"It was a case of the woman doing the courting, was it?" "You are excused," concluded the counsel.

John B. Rowlands, brother of the defendant, was next called and told of acts of familiarity between his sister-in-law and Norton. He told that in August last, while Norton was at work in the field with a team, Mrs. Rowlands went to the field and after a brief talk with Norton they walked away into the brush along a creek, leaving the team standing in the field. They were gone for about two hours. The next day the witness saw the same thing repeated.

Constable Larrabee testified that he accompanied Mr. Rowlands and Constable Gillingham to the ranch on the night of September 2, told of the scene he witnessed at the residence and of the arrest of Mrs. Rowlands and Norton.

Elmer Burden told of familiarity between Mrs. Rowlands and Norton while he was working at the ranch during the absence of Mr. Rowlands in August.

At the evening session the defense concluded its case and Mrs. Rowland was recalled for the plaintiff's side. She testified that upon at least two occasions prior to her marriage she was intimate with Mr. Rowlands, and in other particulars denied the testimony given by her husband.

At 9:30 p. m. the case was given to the jury, and at a late hour no agreement being reached, the jury was locked up for the night.

NO INTERFERENCE WITH ALL-AIRALL WIRELESS SYSTEM.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Gen. Greely, chief signal officer of the army, has decided to install a wireless telegraph system between Zamboanga and Jolo, Philippine islands. The strong tides that flow between the islands wear the cables against the coral, and they are frequently cut and rendered useless. It is expected that the new system will be in operation in about three months.

SPEARFISH COMPANY GETS BETTER ORE

Advices received yesterday from Spearfish, S. D., give the information that a better grade of ore has been encountered in new drifts on the Noerenberg mining company's property and that dividends may be resumed in a few weeks.

While the company has never suffered for a lack of ore, yet that which has been mined for the last two months has been of such low grade that profits have been small. Now, however, with the increased capacity of the mill, and also the facilities for finer crushing of the ore, and being a higher extraction, there seems no doubt that dividends are an assured fact.

The company has 300 acres of ground and good ore bodies underlie all this ground, so far they have not worked over more than ten or fifteen acres, so that they still have ore enough to run them for many years.

This is a better country to live in, because Schilling's Best is in it.

1,000 British sailors and marines arrived here and were everywhere treated with the greatest friendship. While some of them remained in the park to watch the trials of strength and skill, others, attended by Auldrs and officers, walked or drove through the streets and enjoyed themselves sightseeing. The presence of a British sailor meant open sesame everywhere. The street cars were free to them and special discounts were allowed them at all shops.

RUMOR SEEMS TO BE WITHOUT FOUNDATION

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Nothing is known here concerning the rumors circulated in London that two New York stock firms are in difficulty. Investigation by cable showed that the so-called large firm was a small house with financial standing of about $10,000 and that it probably will be able to tide over its embarrassment.

Woman's Kidney Troubles

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Especially Successful in Curing This Fatal Disease.

Mrs. J. W. Lang and Mrs. S. Frake

Of all the diseases known with which women are afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal. In fact, unless early and correct treatment is applied, a very patient seldom survives.

Being fully aware of this, Mrs. Pinkham, early in her career, gave exhaustive study to the subject, and, in producing her remedy for women's ills—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—was careful to see that it contained the most potent combination of herbs which was sure to control that fatal disease, woman's kidney troubles. The Vegetable Compound acts in harmony with the laws that govern the entire female system, and while there are many so called remedies for kidney troubles, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the only one especially prepared for women, and thousands have been cured of serious kidney derangements by it. Derangements of the feminine organs quickly affect the kidneys, and when a woman has such symptoms as pain or weight in the loins, backache, bearing down pains, urine too frequent, scanty or high colored, producing scalding or burning, or deposits like brick dust in it; unusual thirst, swelling of hands and feet, swelling under the eyes or sharp pains in the back, passing down the inside of her groin, she may be sure her kidneys are affected and should lose no time in combating the disease with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the woman's remedy for women's ills.

The following letters show how [illegible] effectively it works.

Mrs. Samuel Fry, of [illegible] Plains, N. J., writes:

LAW ENFORCEMENT PAYS.

IN A LETTER published elsewhere on this page "A Colorado City Taxpayer," commenting on The Gazette's editorial of last Wednesday on the growth of Colorado City, remarks the connection between the present prosperous condition of that town and the suppression of open gambling there. This is a point well worth considering.

Until about two years ago gambling houses flourished in Colorado City as openly as in any frontier mining camp. The sporty element of the town, which was larger then than it is now, insisted that if the tiger's claws were clipped the place would stagnate; there would be less money in circulation and business interests would suffer. This is an old and familiar argument. It has been used in every town and city in the country where efforts have been made to suppress gambling and kindred evils, but its fallacy has usually been proven by actual experience. This was the case in Colorado City. Two years ago Judge Cunningham, of the District Court, effectually stopped open gambling there by sending several proprietors of gambling houses to jail and destroying their paraphernalia. Since then, as "A Colorado City Taxpayer" remarks, "in no city of its size in the West are the laws against gambling better enforced."

Colorado City is now growing rapidly in population and prosperity. We do not say that this condition is due entirely to the suppression of gambling. Perhaps the town would be just as prosperous if gambling still flourished. But we do say that the suppression of gambling has not had the bad effect which the defenders of a "wide-open town" predicted. Old residents of the place declare that it was never before in a healthier and better condition. There must be some cause of this, and it is perfectly reasonable to ascribe at least a part of the credit to the closing of the gambling houses.

The lesson to be learned from Colorado City's experience is that it never does a city any harm to enforce strictly all laws which make for decency and good citizenship. The friends of the Colorado Springs druggists who sell liquor in violation of the law are putting forth many "arguments" to show why such violation should be tolerated. Some are idiotic, some merely silly, and all are unreasonable. One of them is that the strict enforcement of the liquor laws would "hurt the town"; that the community is too hidebound anyway and needs a little loosening up. This is merely the contention made by the Colorado City gamblers two years ago, expressed in different words.

It would be interesting to hear somebody explain how the enforcement of the liquor laws, or any other laws, can injure the best interests of Colorado Springs. It will injure the interests of law-breakers, like Fehringer, Zohrlaut, and a few others of their stripe, and it will injure the interests of one or two corrupt lawyers who make dishonest livings defending people as crooked as themselves, but surely this is "a consummation devoutly to be wished." It can not be argued that the strict enforcement of the liquor laws would tend to increase drunkenness—plain common sense shows that it would have the opposite effect. It could not injure the legitimate business interests of the city, for legitimate business interests have nothing in common with law-breakers, especially with men engaged in breaking liquor laws. Moreover, it is a well known fact that scores of families have been attracted to Colorado Springs and induced to become permanent residents solely or partly because of the restrictions placed on the sale of liquor and other safeguards which favor this city as a place in which to bring up children.

The respectable, law-abiding people of Colorado City have proven that their town can be better off morally and materially without the gambling evil. Let the respectable, law-abiding people of Colorado Springs take the lesson to heart and apply it to their own problem.

PHILADELPHIA'S STRUGGLE.

PHILADELPHIA is struggling hard to retain the measure of civic decency gained last spring when Mayor Weaver broke with the gang and took out flat-footed in defense of the principles and practices of honest government. The Republican organization, which is still in control of the clique which Secretary Root denounced as "a corrupt and criminal combination, not worthy to be called Republicans," is opposed by every "respectable" element in the city, save one. Its sole appeal is based on the hypocritical plea that the party Republicans, for as far as they are allowed to think of the voters of the city belong to that party, the gang hope to hoodwink them into believing that party fealty demands a restoration of the old order of things.

A half-page paid advertisement being run in most of the Philadelphia papers, contains this choice bit of snivelling hypocrisy:

"The Republican party—the party of Lincoln, and of McKinley, and of Roosevelt—appeals to the citizens of Philadelphia to support the reputable, honest and respected candidates it has named for the Judiciary, Sheriff, Coroner and City Commissioners. . . . The Republican party appeals through this medium for loyal support of its nominees."

The Republican party of Philadelphia deserves all the opprobrium its bosses have brought upon it in the past if it does not shake this brazen effrontery by an overwhelming defeat at the polls. About two years ago Lincoln Steffens discribed the Quaker City as "corrupt and contented." The bosses are still corrupt, but the people are no longer contented. They have awakened to the fact that the control of the dominant party has passed into the hands of what is probably the worst gang of municipal lawless that ever disgraced this country, and that "reform within the party" is a dream that can not be realized. The only hope of effective and permanent relief lies in the triumph of the City ticket, nominated by the secret citizens' committee, irrespective of party affiliations. It is with this hope that we look to the election, and if the Republicans do not seize this opportunity to rescue not only the city, but their party from the hands of the villainous crew who have dragged its name in the mud they have no right to complain hereafter either of bad government or of the betrayal of the party.

It is only natural that the grafters, franchise-grabbers and other demoralizing influences should associate themselves with a political party which is so strongly and apparently permanently intrenched in power. But such men have no political convictions in the ordinary sense of the term. They are mere harpies in politics for revenue only, and it makes no difference to them what the name of principles of a party may be so long as they can use that party as an instrument with which to levy tribute on the people. In Philadelphia the corrupt organization is Republican, in New York it is Democratic, in Minneapolis it was Republican, and in St. Louis Democratic. So far as principles are concerned there is no politics in graft, but there is plenty of graft in politics, and it is for the decent people who honor their party principles and traditions and love their party name to root out graft and grafters. This is the task before the Republicans of Philadelphia, and being unable to get control of the organization so as to bring about the reforms from the inside they have perfected a temporary organization to fight the corruptionists from the outside. This is not only the right way, but the only possible way, and their triumph will be a triumph for the cause of honest politics everywhere.

Open Parliament

LAW ENFORCEMENT IN COLORADO CITY.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

I was delighted with your editorial in Wednesday's paper concerning the growth of Colorado City. I have lived in Colorado City for sixteen years, and while at short intervals there has been a greater activity than at the present time in the sale of real estate and building of houses, yet there has never been a time when business generally was on a better basis. The growth you mention has been a healthy, steady growth during the past two or three years.

This condition and these facts should forever put at rest the foolish contention which was so long made that Colorado City could only exist by the violation of the laws respecting gambling. In no city of its size in the west are the laws against gambling better enforced. Instead of this injuring our city it has had quite the contrary effect. If there is one man or set of men who should have a keener interest than another in seeing the laws of his city rigidly and impartially enforced it is the class that owns real estate, especially if he holds that real estate for speculative purposes. From a purely selfish standpoint, it pays to enforce the law. There is no reason in the world why Colorado City has not been able to build nice hotels or fill those she has built except the presence in the past of open gambling dens and the row of saloons that still flourish on her main street. The time will come when our citizens will realize the awful financial sacrifices they have made in order to accommodate the lawless element, and when that time does come we will have hotels filled with tourists instead of saloons filled with a disorderly element.

WHAT A SPECTACLE IT WOULD BE.

TWIN QUALITIES THAT WILL WIN.

The policy concerning the Panama canal enunciated by the president to the consulting board of engineers is wholly commendable. In brief, it is to construct the best canal in the shortest time. The two supremely desirable qualities are promptness and efficiency, and they are co-ordinate. Neither is to be sacrificed to the other, and if not to the other, certainly not to any or all other considerations in the world.—New York Tribune.

WONDERS TO BE SEEN AT HOME.

Within very recent years the American people in general have been learning as they never did before the wonders of their own country. They went abroad for scenery and to view places of historical interest, unmindful that their own land contained spectacles unrivaled elsewhere and relics of a civilization that is prehistoric. Places that only a few years ago had hardly a visitor now attract many thousands annually. The Yellowstone Park has become well known, so are the stupendous canon of the Colorado, the terrific domes of the Yosemite, the imposing Sierras rising sheerly almost from the sea level to heights of nearly three miles. America abounds with miracles of nature, grandly magnificent or marvelously beautiful.—Buffalo Courier.

A Story of Love, War and Witchcraft in Old Geneva

By STANLEY J. WEYMAN

PRESENTLY the drama, always pitiful, increased in intensity. The old lady, who had been her stay and prop, died and left her alone to face the danger. A month later Basterga discovered the secret and began to hold it over her. From this, time passed, a life of cribbing, cinching in the dreams from the fourth, but exaggerated neither the misery nor the beauty. The load had been heavy before. Now to fear was added continuously, and to vague apprehension the immediate prospect of discovery and peril. The grip of the big scholar, subtle, cruel, tightening day by day and hour by hour, was on her youth, slowly is paralyzed in her all the buoyancy of spirit, all the nerves of life and hope, that were part of her age.

That through it all she showed indomitable spirit, we know. We have seen how she bore herself when confronted by an unexpected danger on the morning when Claude Mercier, after overhearing her mother's raving, had his doubts confirmed by the sight of her depression on the stairs. How boldly she met his attack, unforeseen as it was, how bravely she shielded her mother and dearer self, how deftly she made use of the chance the young man's soberer sense afforded her, will be remembered. But not even in that pinch, no, nor in that worse hour when Basterga, having discovered his knowledge, gave her—as a cat plays with a mouse which it is presently to tear to pieces—a little law and a little space, did she come so near to despair as on this evening when the echo of her mother's insane laughter drew her from the living room, at an hour without precedent.

For hitherto Madame Royaume's attacks had come on in the night only. With a regularity not unknown in the morbid world they had occurred about midnight, an hour when her daughter could attend to her and when the house below lay wrapped in sleep. A change in this respect doubled the danger therefore. It did more: the prospect of being summoned at any hour shook, if it did not break, the last remains of Anne's strength. To be liable at all times to such interruptions, to tremble while serving a meal or making a bed lest the dreadful sound arise and reveal all, to listen below and above and never to feel safe for a minute, never, never! who could face, who could endure, who could bear down and rise up under this burden?

It could not be so. As Anne ascended the stairs she felt that the end was coming, was come. Strive as she might, with all the instinct, all the ferocity, of a mother defending her young, the end was come. The secret could not be kept longer. Even while she administered the medicine with shaking hands, while with tears in her voice she strove to still the patient and silence her wildwords, even while she restrained by force the feeble strength that would and could not, while in a word she omitted no precaution, relaxed no effort, her heart told her with every pulsation that the end was come.

And presently, when Madame was quiet and slept, the girl bowed her head over the unconscious object of her love and wept, bitterly, passionately, wetting with her tears the long grey hair that strewed the pillow, as she recalled with piteous clearness all the stages of concealment, all the things which she had done to avert this end. Vainly, futilely, for it was come. The dark mornings of winter recurred to her mind, those mornings when she had risen and dressed herself by rushlight, with this fear redoubling the chill gloom of the cold house; the nights, too, when all had been well, and in the last hour before sleep, finding her mother wane and cheerful, she had nursed the hope that the latest attack might be the last. The evenings brightened by that hope, the mornings darkened by its extinction, the rare hours of brooding, the days and weeks of brave struggle, of fondness never failing, of smiles veiling a sick heart—she lived all these again, looking pitifully back, straining tenderly in her arms the dear being she loved.

And then, stabbing her back to life in the midst of her exhaustion, the thought pierced her that even now she was hastening the end by her absence. They would be asking for her below; they must be asking for her already. The supper-time was come, want past, perhaps; and she was not there! She tried to picture what would happen, what already must be happening; and rising and dashing the tears from her face she stood listening. Perhaps Claude would make an excuse to the others; or, perhaps he had had, he argued?

Her mother was passive now, sunk in the torpor which followed the attack from which the poor woman would awake in happy unconscious of the whole. Anne saw that her charge might be left, and hastily smoothing the tangle of luxuriant hair which had fallen about her face, she opened the door. Another might have stayed to allay the fever of her cheeks, to remove the traces of her tears, to stay the quivering of her hands; but such small cares were not for her, nor for the occasion. She could form no idea of the length of time she had spent upstairs, a half-hour, or an hour and a half; and without more ado she softed the latch, slipped out, and turning the key on her patient ran down the upper flight of stairs.

She anticipated many things, but not that which she encountered—silence on the upper landing, and below when she had descended and opened the stairs-case door an empty room. The place was vacant; the tables were as she had left them, half laid; the pot was gently simmering over the fire.

What had happened? The supper-hour was past, yet none of the four who should have sat down to the meal were here. Had they overheard her mother's terrible cry—those words which colored the woman's despair on finding, as she fancied, the city betrayed? And [illegible] gone to [illegible] her? The thought was di[illegible] enough. But as she turned there came a sound to her ear, so foreign to the place, so out of place, so startling, that she stood as if rooted, and before she could hit on a second explanation a hasty knocking on the door turned her eyes that way.

The four who lodged in the house were not in the habit of knocking, for the door was only locked at night when the last retired. She approached it then, wondering, hesitated an instant, and at last, collecting her courage, raised the latch. The door resisted her impulse. It was locked.

She tried it twice, and only as she drew back the second time did she see the key lying at the foot of the door. That deepened the mystery. Why had they locked her in? Why, when they had done so, had they thrust the key under the door and so placed it in her power? Had Claude Mercier done it, that the others might not enter to know what he heard and discover what he had discovered? Possibly. In which case the knocker, who at that instant made a second earnest attack upon the door, must be one of the others, and the sooner she opened the door the less would be the suspicion created.

With an apology trembling on her lips she hastened to open. Then she stood bewildered; she saw before her not one of the lodgers, but Messer Blondel. "I wish to speak to you," the magistrate said. Before she knew what was happening he had motioned to her to go before him into the house, and following, had locked the door behind them.

She knew him by sight, as did all Geneva; and the blood, which surprise at the appearance of a stranger had brought to her cheeks, fled as she recognized the Syndic. Had they betrayed her, then, while she lingered upstairs? Had they locked her in while they summoned the magistrate? And was he here to make inquiries—something he had heard?

His voice cut short her thoughts without allaying her fears. "I wish to speak to you alone," he said. "Are you alone, girl?" His manner masked excitement. His eyes scrutinized her and searched the room by turns.

She nodded, unable to speak.

"There is no one in the house with you?"

"My mother," she murmured.

"She is bedridden, is she not? She cannot hear us?" he added imperiously.

"No, but I am expecting the others—to return," she muttered.

"Messer Basterga?"

"Yes."

"He will not return before morning," the Syndic replied with decision, "nor his companion. The two young men are safe also. If you are alone therefore, I wish to speak to you."

She bowed her head nervously.

"The young man who lodges here—of the name of Claude—he came to you some time ago, and told you that the state needed certain letters which the man Basterga kept in a steel box upstairs? That is so, is it not?"

"Yes, Messer Syndic."

"And you looked for them?"

"Yes, I—I was told that you desired them."

"You found a phial? You found a phial, I say?" the Syndic repeated, passing his tongue over his lips. His face was flushed; his eyes shone with a peculiar brightness.

"I found a small bottle," she answered slowly. "There was nothing else."

He raised his hand. If she had known how the delay of a second tortured him! "Describe it to me," he said. "What was it like?"

Wondering, the girl tried to describe it. "It was small and of a strange shape, of thin glass, Messer Syndic," she said. "Shot with gold, or there was gold afloat in the liquid inside. I do not know which."

"It was not empty?"

"No, it was three parts full."

His hand went to his mouth, to hide the workings of his lips. "And there was with it—a paper, I think?"

"No."

"A scrap of parchment, then? Some words, some figures?" His voice rose as he read a negative in her face. "There was something surely?"

"There was nothing," she said. "Had there been a scrap even of writing—"

"Yes, yes?" He could not control his impatience.

"I should have sent it to you. I should have thought," she continued earnestly, "that it was that you needed, Messer Syndic; that it was that the state needed. But there was nothing."

"Well, be there papers with it or be there not, I must have that phial!"

Anne stared. "But I do not think—" she began with hesitation—and then, she gained courage, she went on more firmly—"that I can take it! I dare not, Messer Syndic."

"Why not?"

"Papers for the state—were one thing," she stammered, in confusion. "But to take this a bottle—would be stealing!"

The Syndic's eyes sparkled. His cheeks quivered. "Girl, don't play with me!" he cried. "Don't dare to play with me!" And then as she shrank back alarmed by his tone, and shocked by this sudden peeping forth of the tragic and the real, lo, in a twinkling he was another man, trembling, holding out shaking hands to her. "Get it for me!" he said. "Get it for me, girl! I will tell you what it is! If I had told you before, I had had it now, and I should be whole and well! whole and well. You have a heart and can pity! women can pity. Then pity me! I am rich, but I am dying! I am a dying man, rising up and lying down, counting the days as I walk the streets, and seeing the shroud rise higher and higher upon my breast!"

He paused for breath, endeavoring to gain some command of himself, while she, carried off her feet by this rush of words, stared at him in stupefaction. Before he came he had made up his mind to tell her the truth, or something like the truth. But he had not intended to tell her the truth in this way until, face to face with her and met by hesitation, he let the impulse to tell the whole story carry him away.

He stretched his hand with a shaking hand. "You know now why I want it," he resumed, speaking huskily and with restrained emotion. "'Tis life! Life, girl! In that—" he fought with himself before he could bring out the word—"in that phial is my life! Is life, for whoever takes it! It is the remedium, it is strength, life, youth, and but one dose to all the world! Do you wonder—I am dying! that I want it? Do you wonder—I am dying! that I will have it? But—" with a strange grimace intended to reassure her—"I frighten you. I frighten you."

"No, no!" she said, though in truth she had unconsciously retreated almost to the door of the staircase before his extended hands. "But I—I scarcely understand, Messer Blondel. If you will please to tell me—"

"Yes, yes!"

"What, Messer Basterga—how—he comes to have this?"

She must parley with him until she could collect her thoughts, until she could make up her mind whether he was sane or mad and what it behooved her to do.

"Comes to have it?" he cried vehemently. "God knows! And what matter? 'Tis the remedium, I tell you, whoever has it. It is the [illegible] of youth!" he repeated, his eyes glittering, his face working, and the impulse to tell her not the truth only, but more than the truth, if he might thereby dazzle her, carrying him away. "It is health of body, though you be dying, as I am! And health of mind though you be possessed of devils! It is a cure for all ills, for all weaknesses, all diseases, even," with a queer grimace, "for the Scholar's evil! Think you, if it were not rare, if it were not something above the common, if it were not what leeches seek in vain, I should be here! I should have more than enough to buy it, I, Messer Blondel of Geneva?" He erased, lacking words. Oh.

"But," she said timidly, "will not Messer Basterga give it to you? Or sell it to you?"

"Give it to me? Sell it to me? He?" Blondel's hands flew out and clawed the air as if he had the Paduan before him, and would tear it from him. "He give it me? No, he will not. Nor sell it! He is keeping it for the grand duke! The grand duke, curse him! Why should he escape more than another?"

Anne stared. Was she dreaming or had her brain given way? Or was this really Messer Blondel the austere Syndic, this man standing before her, shaking in his limbs as he poured forth this strange farrago of remedia and scholars and princes and the rest? Or if she were not mad, was he mad? Or could there be truth, any truth, any fact in in the medley? His clammy face, his trembling hands answered for his belief in it. But could there be such a thing in nature as this of which he spoke? She had heard of panaceas, things which cured all ills alike; but hitherto they had found no place in her simple creed. Yet that he believed she could not doubt; and how much more he knew than she did! Such things might be in the cabinets of princes, perhaps, purchasable by a huge fortune and by the labor, the engrossment, the devotion of a life. She did not know, and for him his acts spoke.

"It was this that Louis Gentilis was seeking?" she murmured.

"What, else?" he retorted, opening and shutting his hands. "Had I told him the truth, as I tell it you, the thing had been in my grasp now!"

"But are you sure," she ventured to ask with respect, "that it will do these things, Messer Blondel?"

He flung up his hands in a gesture of impatience. "And more! And more!" he cried. "It is life and strength, I tell you! Health and youth! For body or mind, for the old or the young! But enough! Enough, girl!" he resumed in an altered tone, a tone grown suddenly peremptory, urgent, dangerous. "Get it me! Do you hear? Stand no longer talking! At any moment they may return, and—and it may be too late."

Too late! It was too late already. Even as he spoke, the door shook under an angry summons. As he stiffened where he stood, his eyes fixed upon it, his head still pointing his ear to his hiding, a face showed white at the window and vanished again. An instant he imagined it. Basterga, and hard, voice, eyes, all hung frozen. This he saw his mistake, for whomsoever the face belonged it was not Basterga's; and find ing voice and breath again, "Quick!" he muttered. "Do you [illegible] girl? Get it before they come!"

Her hand was on the latch of the inner door. Another second and saved by haste, she would have gone up and got the thing he needed, and the door would have shut them out, and within the state would have [illegible] from him, and no one to make wise. But as she turned there came a second attack on the door so loud so persistent, so furious, that [illegible] remembering that the duplicate [illegible] Basterga's chamber was in the bachelor's room, and that she must go to the top of the house for it.

He saw her hesitation, and [illegible] the face which had looked [illegible] the night, and which still [illegible] watching his movements, his resolution gave way. The habits of a life of [illegible] alism prevailed. The thing was as good as his, she would get it presently. Why, then cause talk and scandal by excluding those persons whose [illegible] were when the thing might be had without talk?

"Tonight!" he cried rapidly. "Do it tonight, then! Do you hear, girl? You will be sure to get it?" His eyes [illegible] from her to the door and back. "Basterga will not return until [illegible] row. You will get it tonight!"

She murmured some form of [illegible]

"Then open the door! open the door!" he urged impatiently. And with a stifled oath, "A little more and they will rouse the town!"

She ran to obey, the door flew open and into the room bundled first Louis without his cap, and then on his heels and gripping him by the nape, Claude Mercier. Nor did the latter seem in the least degree abashed by the presence in which he found himself. On the contrary, he looked at the Syndic, his head high, as if he, and not the magistrate, had the right to an explanation.

But Blondel had recovered himself. "Come, come!" he said, sternly. "What is this, young man? Are you drunk?"

"Why was the door locked?"

"That you might not interrupt me," Blondel replied severely, "while I asked some questions. I have it in my mind to ask you some also. You took him to my house?" he continued, addressing Louis.

Louis whinned that he had.

"You were late then?" His cold eye returned to Claude. "Attend me to-morrow at nine, young man. Do you hear? Do you understand?"

"Yes."

"Then have a care you are there, or the officers will fetch you. And you?" he continued, turning more graciously to Anne, "see, young woman, you keep counsel. A still tongue buys friends, and is a service to the state. Write that—good night."

He looked from one to the other with a sour smile, nodded, and passed out.

He left Claude staring in the middle of the room. The love, the pity, the admiration of which the lad's heart had been full an hour before, still hungered for expression; but it was not easy to vent them, before Louis now at a moment when the Syndic's cold eye and the puzzle of his presence had chilled for the time the atmosphere of the room.

Saved My Life.

J. W. Davenport, Winchester, Ky., writes, June 14, 1902: "I want to tell you I believe Ballard's Snow Liniment saved my life. I was under the treatment of two doctors, and they told me one of my lungs was entirely gone, and the other badly affected. I also had a lump on my side. I don't think that I could have lived over two months longer. I was induced by a friend to try Ballard's Snow Liniment. The first application gave me relief; the 50 cent bottle cured me sound and well.

"It is a wonderful medicine and I recommend it to all." Sold by Nathan Arco Pillas Drug Co.

ELECTRIC SHOCKS DRIVE FALSE TEETH.

"False teeth have been known to generate electricity in the mouth and shock their wearer painfully," said a physician. "Only last week a gentleman came to me and said he feared he was getting a cancer on his tongue. 'Such severe shooting pains attack me,' he said, 'that often I utter loud oaths in the most inappropriate places—at table, before the minister, and so on. It is like little thunderbolts. Do you think I am going to lose my tongue?' I found that two different metals had been used in fixing the poor man's false teeth. These metals, combining with the saliva, had formed a small battery. Electricity generated in the battery continually and shock after shock was administered to the tongue. I painted the metals with an insulating varnish. Thereafter the man had no more trouble."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

RED DETECTIVES IN EARLY DAYS TO SECURE EVIDENCE AGAINST LOCAL DRUGGISTS

Rev. J. P. Ralstin, Founder of Deaf and Blind Institute as Well as of First Christian Church, Tells of Liquor Fight Here in the 80's.

"We tried all kinds of means to stop the illegal sale of whisky in the early 80's, but we found the most effective way was to hire detectives. Oh yes, we hired detectives those days. We found we had to. We would try and convict a druggist, then he would appeal the case. Then we would convict him again and he would appeal again. But at last we made them sick of it and they all gave bonds to respect the law."

Rev. J. P. Ralstin, of Santa Fe, who came to this city in 1874 and who affiliated with the Colorado School for the Deaf and the Blind and the First Christian church of Colorado Springs, is visiting here at 1821 Colorado avenue. Dr. Ralstin lived here 14 years, which time he was superintendent of the institute, a member of the council, a minister of the gospel and furniture dealer.

Now Mr. Ralstin says that when he came here 31 years ago the population of the city was less than 1,000 and the town's business was all done on Cucharas avenue between where the Antlers hotel now stands and Huerfano. There were a few buildings off the rock but they were mostly saloons. All the land from the present building to the Exchange National bank and from this bank south to Mr. Whait's store, was vacant.

The only newspaper in town then was the Weekly Gazette, says the Rev. Mr. Ralstin last night. It's staff consisted of J. E. Lillier, editor, Mr. Pierce, proprietor and two compositors. They never had any reporters in those days to go around and wake people up at night like this—and I guess it was just as well.

The first year that Dr. Ralstin came here he began working for a state school for the deaf and blind. He went to Denver and had an appropriation bill passed in the legislature and was asked upon to give an exhibition of the art of teaching afflicted children before a joint meeting of the two houses. An appropriation of $5,000 was made and the board of trustees appointed Ralstin to take charge.

The institute was first conducted in a history frame building on Cucharras street facing the Alamo park. Dr. Ralstin started the school April 1, 1874. There were seven pupils, all deaf mutes and he was the only instructor. There were no blind pupils for ten years.

A year later the Colorado Springs company offered the institute a building free of rent. Dr. Ralstin accepted the location where the institute now is. He remained with the school as superintendent for seven years thereafter and founded the institute.

Dr. Ralstin founded the First Christian church in 1877, with fifteen members, and the first meeting were held in the old M. E. church south. In 1880 the M. E. church on E. Pikes Peak avenue was purchased and services were held there until the new church was built in 1890. Dr. Ralstin was elder of the church and preached there when they had no regular pastor.

After leaving the institute Dr. Ralstin embarked in the furniture business. He was associated with S. B. Westerfield in the firm Westerfield and Ralstin and later with D. P. Farley in the firm Ralstin & Farley, which later became Farley Bros.

Dr. Ralstin served in the city council in the early 80's. During that time the city administration had a fight with the druggists of the city for selling liquor illegally and Dr. Ralstin says he took a leading part on the side of law and enforcement.

"We tried all kinds of means to stop the illegal sale of whisky," said Dr. Ralstin last night, "but found the most effective way was to hire detectives. Oh yes, we hired detectives those days—we found that we had to. We would try and convict a druggist, then he would appeal the case. Then we would convict him again and he would appeal again. But at last we made them sick of it and they all gave bonds to respect the law."

Dr. Ralstin is a brother of L. W. and E. L. Ralstin of the local commission firm of Ralstin Bros. and is brother-in-law of Mrs. Mattie J. Ralstin of 1224 Colorado avenue. He is accompanied on his trip here by Mrs. Ralstin, who lived in Colorado Springs with her husband during the early days.

Dr. Ralstin will occupy the pulpit of the First Christian church next Sunday morning.

WOMAN WRAPPED IN FLAME BREAKS UP CHURCH SERVICE

Exploding Oil Can Seriously Burned Mrs. Belle Greenleaf. Members of Congregation Extinguish Flames---Skin Grafting May Be Necessary to Save Her Life.

At a quarter to [illegible] last night the members of the congregation of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, 24 East Williamette avenue, were startled by the sudden entrance of a woman whose clothing was a mass of flames from head to foot. The sight was startling. The Rev. W. H. Duncan pastor, rushed from the pulpit to the unfortunate woman's side. A dozen men in the audience sprang to his assistance, and they rushed the frantic woman into the yard and cast her prostrate upon the damp grass, thus putting out and tearing the burning clothing from her body. Her screams of frightful pain were heart rending. The thought of it shocked the congregation that the service was abandoned.

While Mrs. Belle Greenleaf, wife of Albert Greenleaf, 741 East Williamette avenue, was building a kitchen fire at her home a gallon can of oil exploded and set fire to her clothing and to the house. She was terribly burned on her left side and over her shoulders, but has fair chances of recovery. The damage to the house is small. Fire companies Nos. 1 and 2 responded promptly to the alarm which members of the Latter-Day Saints church turned in.

Mrs. Greenleaf used coal oil to build her fire and then placed the can in the wood box. After lighting her fire she [illegible] burning match [illegible] box. The burning papers caused the can of oil to explode, sending it crashing down the stairs. Greenleaf [illegible] burning from her body, but the [illegible] blinded her. Dazed [illegible] church [illegible] two doors [illegible] home.

A remarkable feature of the accident is that she was terribly burned from the neck to the knee in the back, and from the neck to the breast being badly seared. Her face was [illegible] and will heal [illegible].

Mr. Greenleaf is employed [illegible] by the telephone company [illegible] at Fort Carson where he has been notified of the distressing [illegible].

Dr. J. [illegible] was called [illegible]. Mrs. Greenleaf's life says that grafting of human cuticle may be necessary to save the unfortunate woman's life. She was taken to St. Francis hospital.

W. S. McBurney of 424 North Prospect street, was severely burned about the hands and arms while engaged in tearing the burning clothing from Mrs. Greenleaf, and was compelled to receive medical attention. His efforts undoubtedly saved the woman's life.

Mrs. Greenleaf's mother, Mrs. M. J. Hobbs, 711 East Garfield street, was notified of the accident to her daughter and remained with her all night. In the meantime a messenger has been sent to notify the husband.

FORM TROOP OF CAVALRY

COMPANY I, N. G. C., WINS RECOGNITION FROM ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE.

MAY SOON BE TRANSFORMED FROM INFANTRY TO THE MOUNTED SERVICE—PRIZE SHOOT

According to a rumor which has been circulating in National Guard circles for the last week Adjutant General Bulkeley Wells will soon issue an order transferring company I, N. G. C., of Colorado Springs from the infantry to the cavalry division.

Officers of the Colorado National Guard have been considering the formation of a cavalry troop for several weeks but did not decide which company would be given horses and saddles until after the recent inspection of the companies of the state. In this inspection Company I made a splendid showing.

Company I is one of the best drilled and uniformed companies in the state. Its record for length of service during the Cripple Creek strike was the best of all the Colorado companies and it was partly for this reason that Company I was mentioned for cavalry service. Another change which is to be made in the N. G. C. is the placing of a battery of artillery at Victor, Colo.

General Wells has issued an order announcing that the competitive drill for the Willcox trophy will take place early in November on the Golden target grounds. Teams of eights from the various companies of the state selected from among the highest averages in the regular practice, will compete. It is expected that both of the local companies will send teams.

INDICTMENT FOR PERJURY

JUDGE ELSTON MAY TAKE CASE BEFORE FEDERAL GRAND JURY.

DISCUSSES CONNECTION WITH KARL SCHUYLER IN SALE OF RAYMOND MINING STOCK.

Hon. William Maher has made an affidavit in federal court at Denver charging that I was his attorney in the settlement of the Raymond Consolidated Mining company case or that I had anything to do with the sale of his stock in that company. I shall bring the matter before the federal grand jury in Denver and will have him indicted for perjury. I am satisfied that when the matter is called to the attention of Mr. Maher's attorneys they will be glad to file an amended complaint."

That is what Judge J. A. Elston had to say last night when he returned from Kentucky and "The Gazette" and read an article in a recent edition of The Gazette stating that William Maher had accused himself and Karl Schuyler of selling mining stock belonging to him for $7,500 when it was worth $160,000 and of closing two suits relating to this stock without his permission.

"Mr. Maher tells the truth when he says that he once refused an offer of $15,000 for the stock which is alleged to have been sold for $7,500," Judge Elston said. "At that time I was his attorney and I advised him to close for $15,000, but he turned the offer down and I understood that it was Mr. Schuyler who advised him not to take that price. As far as I am concerned—I can prove by Mr. Schuyler, by Mr. Waters and by the attorneys on the other side of the case that I had nothing to do with the settlement of the cases nor with the sale of the stock. As a matter of fact I knew nothing whatever of these developments until I returned home today and read it in the newspapers.

"I haven't been Mr. Maher's attorney since last March when I withdrew from the cases, by mutual consent. Mr. Maher settled with me in full and I have nothing against him. If, however, he has made an affidavit that I am in any manner responsible for the sale of his stock or the settlement of those suits I shall take the matter up with the federal grand jury and endeavor to have him indicted for perjury. Not only did I have nothing to do with the matter, but I am not so much as acquainted with J. H. Waters, who is reported to be the purchaser of the stock in question. I shall examine the court records at Denver and see just what Mr. Maher has stated in his complaint."

MADE FINAL PLANS FOR FIELD MEET

The judges who will officiate at the fall field meet today of the El Paso County Anti-Cigarette league met at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon and received their assignments from D. L. Hoffer, who will conduct the meet. The team captains also met with Mr. Hoffer and completed final arrangements for the meet. Several players on the different teams were contested yesterday, but the contests will not be decided until this morning. A feature of the meet, and one which has never before been tried, will be the displaying of the results of events on a large blackboard on the field at the close of each event. The meet begins at 2 o'clock this afternoon on Washburn field, Colorado college campus.

KINGSLEY FINDS FRESH TROUBLE

DR. ASWOLD KINGSLEY, FORMERLY BRIEFLY ARRESTED FOR WITHOUT A LICENSE, INVOLVED WITH STATE BOARD.

Dr. Aswold Kingsley is in trouble with the state board of medical examiners for hanging out a shingle announcing himself as a practical practitioner without first securing a license. He has opened an office in the Railway Exchange building, upon the door of which are the words "Dr. Kingsley, 8 a. m. to 5 p. m." This is alleged to be in violation of the state law and the state board is now investigating the matter.

The "doctor" has been in the public limelight upon many occasions and is now the defendant in a case which was appealed from the court of Justice Dunnington to the county court. He was charged with cruelty to animals, was convicted and heavily fined, but secured an appeal to the county court. During the trial he was asked what medical college he graduated from but was unable to give the name, beyond saying it was the government medical college of London, England.

Traffic Manager W. A. Mattock of the Short Line arrived from Cripple Creek yesterday and his headquarters will be in this city hereafter.

CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLEMENT

CONSTANTINE CASSER ARRESTED ON COMPLAINT OF A WOMAN AND RELEASED ON $700 BOND.

Constantine Casser, a well-known sporting leader, residing at 1812 North Nevada avenue, was arrested Saturday by Constable Larrabee upon a warrant charging him with embezzling the sum of $70, the property of Helen West. Bond was fixed at $700 and was at once furnished by Mrs. Ida W. Casser, wife of the defendant.

The complaint was sworn to by Helen West, who charges that on March 16, 1905, the defendant, while in possession of $72 cash, the personal property of the affiant, converted the same to his own use with intent to steal the same. The warrant was issued at the direction of Assistant District Attorney John W. Shaefer. The case was set for hearing before Justice W. N. Ruby on October 12.

PEAT BEDS IN LAKE MORAINE

OFFICIALS AND PARTY OF CITIZENS MAKE TOUR OF CITY'S MOUNTAIN WATER SYSTEM

A valuable addition for the city's water system was seen on a trip to Seven Lakes and the reservoirs yesterday by the mayor, the members of the city council and the [illegible] Aldermen [illegible] Hopkins, City Attorney [illegible], City Clerk McMillen, City Engineer [illegible] Ashworth, Water Superintendent [illegible] Hopkins, Dr. P. O. Hartford, [illegible] Dodge, G. B. Tripp, [illegible] Lilly, W. A. Otis and Chief Engineer Reisdorf of the Short Line.

Upon arriving at the Seven Lakes, over the long road the party went to the eastern entrance to the Seven Lakes and then to reservoirs No. [illegible].

The work of cleaning reservoir No. [illegible] is about finished and will be ready to store water this winter. The old buildings left by the contractors have been torn down and a new building erected for the use of the caretaker who will be placed in charge by the city. A portion of the lumber has been hauled to Lake Moraine where it will be used in constructing a boat house for the use of the members of the rubbish and refuse which were left in the lake by the contractors has also been hauled away.

At noon today the party left the Seven Lakes for Lake Moraine using carriages for the trip. At the lake the work of removing peat from the water and cleaning the reservoir is steadily in progress. The peat is from six to eight feet in the lake and is handled in the same manner as blocks of ice. The mass is being cut into large blocks by men in boats and on a raft and towed near the shore where it is raised by hook and tackle and deposited upon the shore to dry. When thoroughly dry it is burned. The work of cleaning the lake is slow owing to the immense amount of peat.

The party reached home via the Bear Creek road at 6:30 p. m. Aldermen Allen and Superintendent Hopkins remained at Lake Moraine with the intention of returning home today by way of Buxton creek in order to examine the operations of the Pikes Peak Hydro-Electric company.

The seat sale for Elbert Hubbard's lecture is a great success. Why not get your tickets this morning and make sure of choice seats.

NOT FAVOR THE PUEBLO CONGRESS

[illegible] Burns secretary of the Colorado Commercial association, thinks the call of Pueblo business men for a meeting for the purpose of organizing the Southwestern Commercial congress is ill-timed. "It is the name to me that takes exceptions," said Mr. Burns, who spent yesterday in Colorado Springs. "Our state organization has been for two years to overcome all sectional prejudice. We do not want sectional ideas emphasized, but wish to entirely destroy it. We have practically accomplished this good result. The adoption by any organization of a name which would restore that prejudice would be most unhappy. I think that nothing will be done by the people in this section of the state to antagonize any other section jealous, but I think that a name will have [illegible] no sentiment for its foundation."

TOTAL OF 350 JURORS IN THE LIQUOR CASES

Going upon the proclamation of Governor McDonald, that yesterday be observed as Columbus day throughout the state, Judge Kerr decided the day a holiday, and adjourned the Harrison liquor case over until today. The district and justice courts declined to observe the holiday and transacted business just as if Columbus never had a day in court.

An order for a special venire of fifty will be entered by Judge Kerr in the county court today for the purpose of trying the case of the City vs. Zobrist. This will make a total of 350 jurors that have been drawn for the liquor cases.

RAILROAD COMPANY ASKS A NEW TRIAL

The defendant in the case of the National Land and Cattle company vs. the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway company filed a motion for a new trial in the district court yesterday. The grounds upon which the railroad asks for the new trial are that the jury awarded excessive damages and alleged errors of the court in admitting improper evidence.

HIGH REQUIEM MASS FOR MRS. M. ZITTEL

Funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Mamie Zittel, wife of Carl Zittel, were held from St. Mary's church yesterday morning at 9:30 o'clock. Three clergymen and thirteen altar boys participated in celebrating the solemn high requiem mass for the dead.

The Rev. Godfrey Raber spoke beautifully of the sweet Christian character of the departed. The large number of people that heard him speak proved that the dead was beloved by all who knew her. Mrs. Zittel will live in the memory of many for her charity. Often in the winter she was accustomed to send coal to the freezing poor. Mr. Zittel and two children, a son and daughter, survive her. Have the sympathy of their many friends in their bereavement.

ORE IS EXPOSED AT THREE POINTS

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Oct. 12.—One is exposed at three points in the Lena mine of the El Paso Consolidated, on a draw between Beacon and Rosebud hills. Most of it is in the 50-foot level, by W. C. Burnside, lessee, who is operating at that point. The shaft was made north of the shaft. A new shoot has been opened up vertically for 50 feet. Underhand stoping has revealed ore of superior grade. Work the first 600 days showed shoots of ore in other sections. Many carloads have broken and ready for shipment. The material broken must be preserved solely to keep up the grade. It carries values from $40 to $60 a ton, and is the rich ore.

MACHINERY NOW INSTALLED ON THE ROBERT H. CLAIM.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Oct. 12.—Installation of machinery has been completed by the Jerry Lode and Mining Company on the Robert H. claim, situated on the west slope of Beacon hill. The plant will be driven by steam, and will be used in increasing the depth of the shaft, which measures 50 feet. It is intended that sinking will continue until the depth of 100 feet is reached. Three ore veins have been discovered in the shaft at intervals. Samples from one vein show good assays.

BIG CONSIGNMENT SOON TO LEAVE THE CRESSON.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Oct. 12.—One thousand tons of ore will probably leave the Cresson mine on Bull hill this month. The grade is running in worth of $25 in gold to the ton. Ore is being broken on the third level, where two bodies of great width have been opened. A square set is being built in one of the stopes.

LITTLE BESSIE HOLDS FORTH MUCH PROMISE.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Oct. 12.—A crosscut is advancing in the Little Bessie claim of Beacon hill at a depth of 200 feet. It is following a vein of much promise, exposed at less depth. Work is being done by a leasing company.

MORE GOOD ORE OPENED ON THE LAST DOLLAR.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Oct. 12.—In their exploration on the bottom level of the Last Dollar, Cunningham and company have developed an ore shoot of average width and good quality. It is yielding about 30 tons a week, having an average value of $40 to the ton.

DEXTER TO HAVE A LARGER HOISTING PLANT.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Oct. 12.—Preparations are being made by the Omaha Leasing company for the installation of a larger hoisting plant on the Dexter. It will be placed behind the plant in use, which is proving inadequate for the task imposed. Ore is being raised from the second and third levels and additions are to be made to the shaft.

One of the principal matters of business to be taken up by the convention is securing the perfect safety paper for tickets. A feature of the convention will be a reception to be tendered the delegates by President Diaz of Mexico.

CITY HALL NOTES

Notice stress has been made by the police for the 48 hours ending at 6 o'clock last evening, and Judge Owen was out for Lake Avenue yesterday.

Two fire calls were turned in yesterday. The first call was received by the chemic at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon for a blaze at 404 North Tejon street, occupied by E. C. Little. The fire was located under the fireplace where woodwork had caught from the chimney, and a small chemical extinguished the fire with a loss of not to exceed $5. The second alarm was at 4:40 p. m. for burning grass and brush on the Santa Fe right of way and Uintah street. Sparks from an engine were responsible.

BOSS OF CITY DUMP FINED FOR ASSAULT

Ben Miller, city dump boss, was given a fine in the court of Justice Dunnington yesterday upon a charge of assaulting Mrs. Lissi Vigelio at the city dump last Sunday. The case was tried before a jury of three. The testimony went to show that Miller seized the complaining witness by the arm, shook her, struck her and then kicked her off the dump. The jury fixed the penalty at $20 and costs. Notice of appeal was given.

THE ROOT OF THE MATTER.

He Cured Himself of Serious Stomach Troubles, by Getting Down to First Principles.

A man of large affairs in one of our prominent cities, after close attention to business, for little exercise and too many club dinners, finally began to pay nature's tax, levied in the form of chronic stomach trouble, the failure of his digestion brought about a nervous irritability making it impossible to apply himself to his daily business and finally deranging the kidneys and bowel.

In his own words he says: "I consulted one physician after another and each one seemed to understand my case, but all the same they each failed to bring about the return of my former digestion, appetite and vigor. For two years I went from pillar to post, from one sanitarium to another. I gave up smoking, coffee and even renounced my daily glass or two of beer without any marked improvement.

"Friends had often advised me to try a well known proprietary medicine, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and I had often perused the newspaper advertisements of the remedy, but never took any stock in advertised medicines nor could believe a fifty-cent patent medicine would touch my case.

"To make a long story short I finally bought a couple of packages at the nearest drug store and took two or three tablets after each meal and occasionally between meals, when I felt any feeling of nausea or discomfort.

"I was surprised at the end of the first week to note a marked improvement in my appetite and general health and before the two packages were gone I was certain that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets was going to cure me completely and they did not disappoint me. I can eat and sleep and enjoy my coffee and cigar and no one would suppose I had ever known the horrors of dyspepsia.

"Out of friendly curiosity I wrote to the proprietors of the remedy asking for information as to what the tablets contained and they replied that the principal ingredients were aseptic pepsin (government test), malt diastase and other natural digestives, which digest food regardless of the condition of the stomach."

The root of the matter is this, the digestive elements contained in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest the food, give the overworked stomach a chance to recuperate, and the nerves and whole system to receive the nourishment which can only come from food. Stimulants and nerve tonics never give real strength, they give fictitious strength, invariably followed by reaction. Every drop of blood, every nerve and tissue is manufactured from our daily food, and if you can insure its prompt action and complete digestion by the regular use of so good and wholesome a remedy as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, you will have no need of nerve tonics and sanitariums.

Although Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been in the market only a few years, probably every druggist in the United States, Canada and Great Britain now sells them, and considers them the most popular and successful of any preparation for stomach trouble.

AMUSEMENTS

RAMONA

The tremendous success of "Ramona," a drama founded upon Helen Hunt Jackson's novel, "Ramona," an international fame, with gorgeous scenic equipment, and a company of splendid artists, will open at the Opera house on tomorrow evening. "Ramona" is a play of rare promise. It has all the elements that make for success. Full of strong dramatic climaxes, emotional power, and a delicious comedy element that is irresistible, it cannot fail to satisfy the most critical. The keenest interest has been created by this romance of romances, and indications are that every seat will be sold. Miss Virginia Calhoun, the fascinating and talented young actress who begins this magnificent production, assumes the title role. Her characterization of Ramona is full of intense charm and pathos. No detail has been spared to make her. The production is satisfying to a degree, the costumes, calcimine and the company of sixteen is full.

CLERGY INVITED TO WITNESS—"THE VOLUNTEER ORGANIST."

The management of the opera house in connection with Mr. W. W. Norcomer, whose beautiful production of the pastoral play, "The Volunteer Organist," appears at the opera house Tuesday evening, October 17, cordially extend to the clergy of the city, also Colorado City and Manitou, an invitation to attend as their guests and witness the play that has received the endorsements of all the clergy of the eastern cities where this most talked of play of the age has been produced. The famous Old Trinity choir, choir boys who appear in the church scene, have been kept busy all week during the past week and are singing like birds, the talk of the town. The reserved seats have been on sale at the box office, and are secured on application.

"THE FORBIDDEN LAND" AT OPERA HOUSE.

The Forbidden Land, one best musical attraction that has been seen at the opera house, will be seen at the attraction this evening. Some one has said that "The Forbidden Land" is an old title for a comic opera, but it matters of indifference, for it is surely an ideal title for a comic opera, as the forbidden land is that whose deep mysteries the Gilbertian Britishers recently set forth to such an extent that pen picks of Asia will soon be in vogue as a result of their discoveries. "The Forbidden Land," by Guy E. Steele, who writes smoothly and wittily, and the music, by Frederic Chapin, a composer of much ability and great brilliancy. The result is a work that rests upon of woman, provokes smiles and laughter instead of tears. The stage settings, which depict scenes in the city of Lhassa, Tibet, are picturesque, interesting and full of color. The costuming is both inventional and elaborate. The opera is in the hands of a most capable cast. It is headed by Edward Garvie and embraces Charles A. Morgan, W. H. Clarke, Thomas Cameron, Hughie Fairbetts, H. S. Austin, Abbott Adams, Alma Noelle, Grace McArty and Mabel Laffin. The chorus is large, experienced, well trained and capable. "The Forbidden Land" is an opera, music, is something to be reckoned with and will undoubtedly attract the attention it deserves.

MARKET UNSTEADY

Weather Reports Influence Wheat—Corn and Oats Are Steady.

CHICAGO, Oct. 12. The wheat market opened weak, with the December option ... lower at ... Although there was a good deal of bearish news, the absence of rain in the northwest will follow close of that section, the movement of the new crop which, on account of the wet weather, had fallen off considerably, is expected to soon assume large proportions.

An advance in the price of wheat at Liverpool had apparently little effect on the market here early in the session. Bullish comment in Australia was said to have enhanced the strength of the English market. Primary markets were quite free sellers here throughout the entire day. Until the concluding minutes the price of December declined to 87½c. The subsequent rally carried the price of December up to 88½c. Prices, however, soon receded again, the close being easy with December at ...

Sentiment in the corn pit was bearish, mainly due to fair to dry Friday weather throughout the middle west. The market opened barely steady, December at 46c to 45½c, sold off to 45c and closed at 44⅞c.

The oats market was comparatively firm. December opened unchanged to ... higher at 25⅞c to 26c, sold between 25⅞c and 26c and closed at 25⅞@26c.

Provisions were firm in sympathy with a 5c advance in the price of live hogs. Trading was quite active. At the close January pork was unchanged at $12.47½. Lard was up a shade at $6.90@6.92½. Ribs were unchanged at $6.50.

"General Nelson A. Miles," said an insurance man, "is fond of testing people by cranks with pneumatic repeating guns, submarine guns, dirigible air balloons and such like partial inventions. The general would send these cranks out with admirable speed.

"I was in his office with him one day when a servant brought in a card.

"'Oh, send him in,' said General Miles. 'His business won't take more than a minute or two.'

"So in came a wild eyed, long haired man, twisting his soft hat nervously in both hands.

"'General,' he said, 'I have here—and he took out a small parcel—a bulletproof vest. If the government would adopt this—'

"'Put it on. Put it on,' said General Miles, and he rang the bell. The servant appeared as the inventor was getting into the coat.

"'James,' said the general, 'tell the captain of the guard to order one of his men to load his rifle with ball and cartridge and—'

"'Excuse me, general,' I forgot something,' interrupted the inventor, and with a hunted look he disappeared.—Independent.

PLAN PARKING IMPROVEMENTS

HILLSIDE RESIDENTS APPROVE COMPREHENSIVE SCHEME OUTLINED BY ALDERMAN HOLDEN.

At the regular meeting of the Hillside Improvement society held last night, Alderman A. M. Holden submitted plans for the parking of the streets in the southeast part of the city. The society heartily approved of the plans and a committee was appointed to investigate the probable cost of the work. The plans are for the side parking and in all probability extensive improvements will soon be started.

The resignation of Mrs. Fenninger as chairman of the program committee was accepted, and the election of her successor will take place at the next meeting of the society, which will be on November 9.

A short program was enjoyed, consisting of songs and recitations, after which the regular business was transacted.

The teachers of the Helen Hunt school were invited to the meeting and took part in the discussion of the following question: "Is it an advantage to the community, and the future welfare of the children, for the teachers to reside in the community in which they teach?"

SALE.—Mrs. Josephine Faulkner has purchased the furniture and will hereafter conduct the rooming establishment at 117 South Tejon street, over the Smith drug store. The purchase price was $1,800 and the deal includes a five-year lease upon the property at a rental of $1,200 per annum. The building will be remodeled at once by Dr. D. E. Smith, fitted with steam heat and made modern throughout.

A MAN WHOSE EYES FALL OUT.

The remarkable case of a man whose eyes drop out has been brought to the notice of the Berlin Medical association. The patient, who has unusually prominent eyes, is a man of fifty-six years. Waking up suddenly one night with excruciating pain, he found his left eye lying on the pillow, but with the aid of his relatives was able to put it back again, the sight not being in any way affected. If the patient leans forward the eye will also fall out, so that the unfortunate man is in a constant state of terror. Sometimes it is the left and sometimes the right eyeball which falls out.—London Mail.
